Dear Ms Sorensen,

Re Blackpoll Warblers.

Last week on Thursday the 4th, I visited Moab and toured the Arches NP and during a walk up to Navajo Arch noticed a warbler in some low trees which I thought of first as a black throated grey . Upon further checking, I noticed the white cheek patch and concluded that it was a Blackpoll.

I notice from the Field check list of the Birds of Utah that it is noted as rare and am trying to determine the frequency of Blackpoll warbler sightings as well as the area where they have been previously recorded. Did anyone else see Blackpoll warblers at the same time and same area that week?

I look forward to hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

I can be reached on email at Suiebill2@aol.com should you wish to respond to me that way.

Kind regards and good birding.

Sincerely,

Bill Stark
