

Sending attachments or a link to a bird photo you've taken

There are several ways to send your pictures to the listservs:

- You can send a photo (or several) by regular attachment to your email. However, for security reasons and to avoid problems with slow internet connections the listservs are very limited on the size of attachments they can handle (no more than 1000 Kb or so total).
- You can send a link to a page you've set up on a "Photo Website" where you've uploaded and organized your pictures. (see the next section)
- Or you can send your picture as an attachment to the webmaster (if you don't know how to reduce it to an internet size) and it will be posted on the "Hotline Photos" page and a link will be sent to the appropriate listserv.

To set up a free photo account

There are several websites that will allow you to upload your photos, organize them, create pages or photo shows, which can all be sent to a listserv by copying the address (URL) at the top your browser and then pasting it in an email to the listserv. (See instructions above).

Here are addresses to several websites that you can use (there are others):

Flicker.com

PhotoBucket.com

pBase.com

Thank you for contributing to the listservs

By using some of the methods above, your messages may be more interesting as well as more informative and helpful. Thanks you for sharing your reports, comments, photos and links with other birders.
